Listening Key to AIB Superior Rating

Stanley, WI, September 1st, 2008 – AIB International has rated Film Tech, LLC with a “Superior” rating, reiterating the benefits of continued investment in quality and safety excellence.

Success in the competitive flexible plastics market is driven by many things, but founded on a mentality for quality excellence throughout the business experience. Being a custom monolayer film manufacturer, each roll of film is designed to fit the end use process needs. AIB International conducts detailed audits to validate whether or not production conditions, processes, and controls are in place to manufacture products that may end up in food contact applications.

“Film Tech custom solutions for bakery and other food applications continue to drive innovation for new applications across a variety of markets”, according to Tim Runge, General Manager. “Our Superior AIB rating is evidence that the team is not just producing plastic film, but delivering a value proposition that is focused on the end user’s functional and safety needs”.

With film designed for mission critical applications, including medical device and healthcare disposables, extremely high quality standards are a must and delivering consistent film products on time is paramount. “Be it infection control, brand image enhancement, or electronic heat resistance, the absolute constant is delivering benefits that are real”, said Justin Latham, Director of Sales & Marketing. “If you don’t listen to the customers and channel partners to identify the real benefits needed, innovation is lost and quality claims are worthless.”
